In my own journey towards parenthood, I found myself on a path that led to a child who was not my own by birth, but certainly of my heart. It was a serendipitous encounter, a meeting of souls that defied all odds and created an unbreakable bond between two hearts.

The first time I laid eyes on this child, my heart skipped a beat. There was an inexplicable connection, a recognition that went beyond the physical. In that moment, I knew that this child had been destined to come into my life, to fill a void that I never knew existed. It was as if the universe had conspired to bring us together, to create a love story that would surpass all boundaries.

Every day since that first encounter has been a journey of discovery. As I opened my heart to this child, I discovered depths of love I never knew were possible. It was a love that knew no bounds, that defied logic and reasoning. It was a love that flowed freely, without expectations or conditions.

Every milestone we shared became a celebration of love. From the first steps taken, to the first words spoken, each accomplishment was met with tears of joy and a sense of overwhelming pride. These were not just ordinary milestones; they were testaments to the love that had blossomed between us.

But it was not just the big moments that held meaning. It was the everyday moments, too - the shared laughter, the whispered secrets, and the quiet moments of comfort. It was the feeling of being needed, of being someone's rock and anchor. It was the knowledge that in this child's heart, I had found a permanent place to call home.

There came a day when this child looked into my eyes, their gaze filled with a mixture of innocence and love. In that moment, they leaned in and placed a gentle kiss on my cheek. It was a kiss that touched the depths of my soul, igniting a spark that would forever burn bright within me.

That kiss was not simply a gesture of affection; it was a proclamation of love. It was a reminder that in this child's heart, I had found a love that transcends all else. It was a symbol of trust, an acknowledgment of the bond we shared.

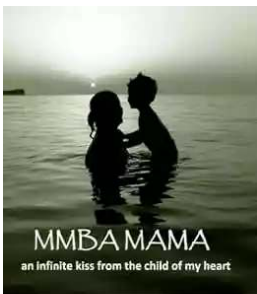

As the years have passed, that initial kiss has become a beacon of love in my life. It is a reminder that the love between a parent and a child is not confined to biology. It is a reminder that the most profound connections are often forged in the unlikeliest of circumstances.

This infinite kiss from the child of my heart has taught me valuable lessons about love, compassion, and the true meaning of family. It has taught me that family is not limited to blood relations, but rather, it is formed by the bonds we create and nurture. It has taught me that love is not limited by physical resemblance, but rather, it is a force that can unite hearts across any divide.

Through this experience, I have come to understand that love knows no boundaries. It is a force that connects souls, breaking down the barriers that society has created. It is a force that can transform lives and make the impossible possible.

So, as I look back on this journey of love, I am filled with gratitude. Gratitude for the twists and turns that led me to this child, and gratitude for the love that we continue to share. The infinite kiss from the child of my heart is a testament to the power of love - a love that has the potential to change lives, heal wounds, and create miracles.

Mmba mama stems from an enduring indigenous South African term used to describe a gentle kiss from a child to a trusted and nurturing being. It calls out to purity, gentleness and a connection from the heart.

This book attempts to record moments of love in this journey of life that are inspired by real-life stories of others who have had the privilege of loving and being loved straight from the heart. It records bonds formed by human hearts that transcend popular culture and socially constructed behavioural expectations. One enters their space and listens to their heartbeats. The overlapping thread is that of regular people who overlook biological connections in search of something deeper that is only formed from within human hearts.

These stories – all instigated by some sort of true love letters forged by life – take us on an unpredictable journey. They surpass statistics, racial and geographical divides, and are not intended to comment on patterns and general outcomes. They are merely slices of life. Their significance lies not in the isolation or the other thereof, but merely in ordinary people faced with the extraordinary opportunity to love at all cost.
