Bearded Collies are medium-sized Scottish herding dogs with long hair that frequently obscures their eyes. This breed is about 50 pounds and stands just under 2 feet tall, with a small dark-colored nose and floppy ears. Mrs. G. Olive Willison established the modern Bearded Collie in 1944, and the breed was admitted to the American Kennel Club in 1977. The original Bearded Collies, on the other hand, date back to at least the 1500s, when Scottish shepherds used them to herd sheep. This dog is very active and requires a lot of grooming, but it is intelligent, alert, and loyal to its family members.
