One stop that cannot be missed is Kazan, the capital of Tatarstan. This vibrant city is known for its stunning architectural blend of Russian and Islamic influences. Visit the incredible Kazan Kremlin, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, and explore its magnificent mosques and cathedrals. As you walk through the historic streets, you'll be captivated by the seamless harmony of cultures that exists in this fascinating city.

No journey through Russia would be complete without a visit to the iconic city of Moscow. From the moment you step off the train, you'll be transported into a world of grandeur and opulence. Marvel at the imposing Red Square, with the iconic St. Basil's Cathedral and the Kremlin towering over you. Visit the world-famous Bolshoi Theatre and immerse yourself in the rich history and culture that this cosmopolitan city has to offer.

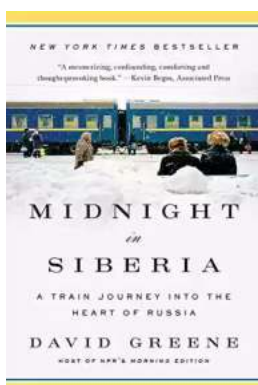

If you're a history enthusiast, the city of Yekaterinburg is sure to leave you spellbound. It is here that you'll find the Church on the Blood, built on the site where the last Tsar of Russia and his family were executed. A somber yet significant landmark, it serves as a poignant reminder of the country's tumultuous past. Explore the museums and galleries, and delve into the fascinating stories that this city has to share.

As the train journey continues, the enchanting town of Irkutsk welcomes you with open arms. Known as the "Paris of Siberia," Irkutsk beautifully blends classic Russian architecture with a vibrant cultural scene. Visit the stunning Wooden Lace House, an architectural masterpiece crafted entirely from wood. Take a stroll along the Angara River and soak in the serene beauty of this charming town.

The final destination of this train journey is the magnificent city of Vladivostok, situated on the shores of the Pacific Ocean. As you arrive, you'll be greeted by the sight of glistening waters and a bustling harbor. Explore the historic city center, stroll along the vibrant promenade, and sample the delicious seafood for which this coastal city is renowned.

Travels with NPR host David Greene along the Trans-Siberian Railroad capture an overlooked, idiosyncratic Russia in the age of Putin.

Far away from the trendy cafés, designer boutiques, and political protests and crackdowns in Moscow, the real Russia exists.

Midnight in Siberia chronicles David Greene’s journey on the Trans-Siberian Railway, a 6,000-mile cross-country trip from Moscow to the Pacific port of Vladivostok. In quadruple-bunked cabins and stopover towns sprinkled across the country’s snowy landscape, Greene speaks with ordinary Russians about how their lives have changed in the post-Soviet years.

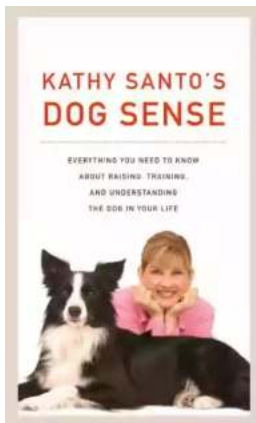

These travels offer a glimpse of the new Russia—a nation that boasts open elections and newfound prosperity but continues to endure oppression, corruption, a dwindling population, and stark inequality.

We follow Greene as he finds opportunity and hardship embodied in his fellow train travelers and in conversations with residents of towns throughout Siberia.

We meet Nadezhda, an entrepreneur who runs a small hotel in Ishim, fighting through corrupt layers of bureaucracy every day. Greene spends a joyous evening with a group of babushkas who made international headlines as runners-up at the Eurovision singing competition. They sing Beatles covers, alongside their traditional songs, finding that music and companionship can heal wounds from the past. In Novosibirsk, Greene has tea with Alexei, who runs the carpet company his mother began after the Soviet collapse and has mixed feelings about a government in which his family has done quite well. And in Chelyabinsk, a hunt for space debris after a meteorite landing leads Greene to a young man orphaned as a teenager, forced into military service, and now figuring out if any of his dreams are possible.

Midnight in Siberia is a lively travel narrative filled with humor, adventure, and insight. It opens a window onto that country's complicated relationship with democracy and offers a rare look into the soul of twenty-first-century Russia.
