Viking Iceland, 1000 AD, pagans and Christians struggle for supremacy, and Kári the Warrior is embroiled in a vicious feud over an inheritance. Influenced by his pacifist foster-father, he tries to resolve his problems through Iceland's elaborate legal system, but is thwarted by the treachery of his wife, the jealousy of his chieftain and the enmity of his adversary. Honor forces him into a revenge killing, which leads to trial for murder. He faces outlawry and death, unless his allies – his foster-brother lawyer, the crippled Christian daughter of his chieftain, and a mysterious Welsh trader– can find a way out.
