A shocking and catastrophic insight of today's male youth are subject to being exposed and succumbing to negative influences as demonstrated by the dangerously increasing rate of police killings, anti-social behavior, school dropout, drug/alcohol usage, sexual behavior leading to death, gangs, rampant criminal activities, bullying and suicide.

No segment of the U.S. population has been more studied, analyzed and dissected than male youths. The reservoir of statistics and academic studies indicates male youth's potential is more indicative of being "high-risk" coming from low-moderate income single-female head of household raising boys.

Research also indicates images of video, games, music, negative generational habit, and TV news not only shape how others see male youths but also can affect how they see themselves. These statistics are alarming and the most likely to forever erode a male youth's chances of becoming a productive citizen with a stable life, family, job, and place in society if a change doesn't occur.
