Justin Bell Guarini's robust professional performance career launched with the first season of American Idol in 2002. His stage and screen appearances since then have included principal roles in six Broadway productions (most notably American Idiot, Romeo and Juliet, Wicked, and In Transit) as well as hosting in-studio shows for The TV Guide Network along with hosting live red-carpet events, the Oscars, the Emmys, and the Grammys.

He continues to reprise his role as the lovable Lil' Sweet in nationally televised commercials for Diet Dr. Pepper. Justin has advocated for music education funding on Capitol Hill by lobbying for the International Music Products Association. He has worked with Education Through Music Los Angeles, a nonprofit utilizing music education as a catalyst to improve academic achievement, motivation for school, and self-confidence in under-served communities.

In 2019, Justin founded The Warrior Artist Alliance to help performers achieve success in a challenging industry. He shares his tips, tricks, breadth of experience, and warrior mindset with a community of performers through podcasts, blogs, and dynamic training programs.
