In many card games and in a set of playing cards, a Joker card is the wild card that has the power or authority to win the whole game, no matter how tilted away from winning that player was before he or she picks up and plays the Joker card for the win. The Joker card is truly the winning card that everyone wants to have and be able to use to win; especially when they seem to be hopelessly losing the game or any other thing in life. As good as being able to start (alpha - beginning) a thing or game is, what is however most important is ending/finishing (Omega) it well/successfully/victoriously or on a most positive note.

Because of the immense power of the Joker card in a playing card game, some players come to the terms and agreement of removing the card before starting the game. They give their reasons for removing the Joker card as it being a joke (something not to be taken seriously) and a spoil sport to have a single card that drastically and completely changes the winning tide of a game; even though every player has the equal and fair chance (opportunity) of picking and playing the Joker card for the win.

Leadership and management of others entails power and authority that are meant to assist the leader or manager in being effective, and to be able to achieve the goals that are set out in front of them. That power or authority however can be positively or negatively used on others, and can also be used for the right goals or wrong (sometimes, hidden and ulterior) goals. Power, they say, corrupts, and absolute power, corrupts absolutely. But that is power that is not subject to the highest power or authority that is able to check its use, or channel it in the positive direction or goals.

A Boss is a Leader or Manager of another person or group of persons. A boss is also someone ahead of another person in a thing or anything e.g. born before you, started at a position in a company before you etc. So a Boss is not limited to males alone, but could also be a female. A Boss has power or influence that directly or indirectly affects another person or persons that they are connected to one way or another. The terms Boss, Leader or Manager will be used interchangeably or synonymously over the course of this book and study that we are on.

You and I were born as tiny and 'helpless' babies into this world, but immediately became 'Bosses, Leaders or Managers' as soon as we busted into the earth.

Each individual's birth throws huge responsibilities around on so many people as soon as the new child shows up. If your birth was aided by a Doctor, nurse, midwife or any other person that happens to be around to help when you were born, they all immediately became individually and jointly responsible to help you survive over the next few minutes or hours till your mother and/or father (unfortunately, sometimes, the government representatives who really have no personal vested interest in what's best for the child) is/are able to take over the task from them.

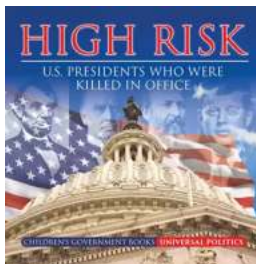

As the baby comes into the world, its cries immediately starts calling the shots as a leader to the people around them. 'I'm hungry, feed me', and someone has to run around to feed the baby. 'I've done number one (1) (peed) or number 2 (pooped) on myself, so, someone needs to clean me of the pee or poop as soon as possible; as a matter of fact, someone needs to drop everything they are doing - no matter how important it is - and get to the task of getting me cleaned NOW, or else there's not going to be any peace or quietness around here - my loud sailings (cries) will ensure that.

Every person ever born was born as a leader! You may feel you are not a leader, or have nothing or no one to lead; but the reality is that since you were born, other people have been born, and continue to be born after you - which puts you ahead of them and for you to indirectly or directly influence or lead them in one thing or another during your lifetime and theirs. How will you lead from now on?
