establishes a federal structure, delineating the powers between the central government and the state governments.

Guarding Fundamental Rights

The Constitution of India grants its citizens fundamental rights that are essential for their development and protection. With long descriptive keywords for all attributes like "right to freedom of speech and expression," "right to equality," "right against exploitation," "right to education," and "right to constitutional remedies," the constitution reaffirms the commitment to liberty, justice, and equality for all.

These principles aim to eradicate poverty, promote education, protect the environment, and ensure social justice for all. With keywords like "right to work and education," "promotion of cottage industries," and "rights of women and children," the constitution echoes its commitment to uplifting marginalized sections of society.
