Can 4 Homeschooled Teen Investigators stop the killers threatening their town without losing their lives, friendships or their faith?

In the shadow of a mysterious government facility, a tragic explosion rocks the town of Steven's Mill, Virginia, and four homeschooled teenagers are swept up in a life or death investigation to uncover the truth.

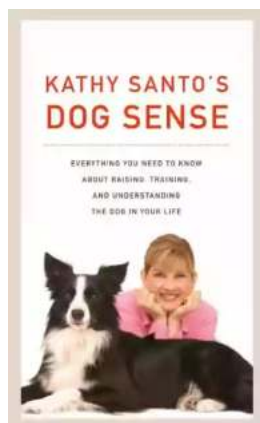

Amateur sleuths Bethany, Rose, Jamie, and Amy find their investigative skills and Christian faith are put to the test when one of their parents is accused of the crime. But, could the fatal explosion have been an accident, or was it part of a larger plot to shut down the clandestine activities at the nearby secret government facility?

Using the knowledge that they learned in their homeschool Criminal Science class, they must investigate the murders and misdeeds within the town if they hope to clear the name of Jamie and Rose's father and bring those responsible to justice.

Dodging danger and threats of death at every turn, the teens in this coming of age story will face challenges to their friendships, family bonds, and relationship with God as they struggle with tragedy and questions of faith.

"Breaking and Entering" is the first book in the "Mount Hideaway Mysteries" series of tie-in books and movies that sets the stage for the adventures that this group of homeschooled friends will embark on. As the prequel to the popular movie, "Mount Hideaway Mysteries: Exes and Oh No's," this book delivers exciting details on the flashbacks and backstory found within the film.

This the Revised Second Edition of the book originally published under the title "Mount Hideaway Mysteries: Breaking and Entering". This new edition has re-edited content and full-color illustrations.
